Sedgwick Press announces the Fourteenth Edition of
*The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory

Praise for previous editions:

“...No similar resource is as comprehensive as this directory. Parents and teachers will find the chapters on teaching materials, assistive devices, and other print and online resources particularly valuable. This work is an obvious choice for any parent resource library or professional library serving special education teachers, but its ease of use and the applicable nature of the subject make it suitable for all public libraries.”

- Library Journal

Sedgwick Press, an imprint of Grey House Publishing, is proud to announce the publication of the Fourteenth Edition of The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory. This 2008 edition is once again distinguished with recognition by the National Center for Learning Disabilities (NCLD) as a valuable resource for the LD community.

According to “Rewards & Roadblocks: How Special Education Students are Faring Under No Child Left Behind” by the National Center for Learning Disabilities, 6.6 million of our school-age children receive some level of additional support through special education. The complete 26-page report, following the Introduction, details several specific requirements of the NCLD, including Proficiency, Participation, Performance and Accountability, and their impact on students receiving special education supports and services.

The 7,055 listings in this edition—260 more than in the last edition—provide a comprehensive look at the variety of resources available for the many different types of learning disabilities, including those that occur in spoken language, written language, arithmetic, reasoning and organizational skills. In addition, the material is logically arranged, for quick, effective research.

Sedgwick Press announces the Fourteenth Edition of The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory.

The listings in The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory are divided into 21 major chapters and 100 sub-chapters, making it easy for users to pinpoint the publication, support group, phone number, key contact or any other LD-related information for which they are looking. Chapters include: National Associations, Summer Programs, Federal Agencies, Publishers, Classroom Resources, Learning Centers, Testing Centers, ADD, Literacy, Media, Transitional Skills and Vocations. Listings provide thousands of valuable contact points, including fax numbers, web sites and key executives. The listings also feature descriptions, founding year, designed-for age, and size of LD population served.

This valuable resource includes three indexes: Entry Name Index, Geographic Index and Subject Index. In addition, a Glossary includes hundreds of definitions and abbreviations for specific disabilities, treatment plans, and legal phrases, such as Auditory Sequencing, FBA (functional behavior assessment) and LRE (least restrictive environment). The Glossary will eliminate guesswork and increase knowledge as you search for listings or network in the LD community.

The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory cuts through the confusion by providing comprehensive, critical, and current information in a single source. This will save both time and energy for anyone living with learning disabilities or involved in the LD community, from parents to teachers, therapists, coaches and camp counselors, just to name a few.

This data is also available as The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory – Online Database. Using powerful search and retrieval software, this interactive Online Database searches quickly by dozens of criteria, making it easier than ever to find just the right LD resource. Visit www.greyhouse.com for a free search through the Online Database or call (800) 562-2139 x.118 for more information.

The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory provides “one stop shopping” for LD information and resources, making it possible to have a single reference on learning disabilities readily available at every school and library across the country, not just at state or district level special education resource centers. With the new 2008 edition, every special education teacher, student, caretaker, social worker, or parent can have, at their fingertips, access to important and valuable LD resources available to help individuals achieve in school and in their communities.
