Grey House Publishing announces the Eighteenth Edition of The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory

Grey House Publishing is proud to announce the publication of the Eighteenth Edition of The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory.

Published since 1992, The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory continues to be a comprehensive and sought-after resource for professionals, families and individuals with learning disabilities. The 4,608 listings in this 2013 edition provide a comprehensive look at the variety of resources available for the many different types of learning disabilities, from those that occur in spoken language, to those that affect organizational skills. It includes a wide array of testing resources, crucial for early diagnosis, and is arranged in subject-specific chapters for quick, effective research.

Following the Introduction are two elements designed to help those individuals and families dealing with a learning disability, whether for the first time, or for a number of years. The first is a short article from the National Institute of Child Health & Human Development that defines a number of specific learning disabilities, and discusses not only what to look for when diagnosing a learning disability, but also what treatment options are available. The second is an in-depth Glossary from ldonline, a leading website about learning disabilities and ADHD. This Glossary provides more than 200 clear, detailed definitions of acronyms and specialized terms frequently used in books, articles, medical offices and educational environments that are devoted to individuals with learning disabilities and their network of family, friends, and professionals.

The listings in The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory are divided into 21 major chapters and 100 sub-chapters, making it easy for users to pinpoint the exact type of desired reference, including Associations, National/State Programs, Publications, Audio/Video, Websites, Products, Conferences, Schools, Learning/Testing Centers, and Summer Programs. Listings provide thousands of valuable contact points, including more than 7,000 key executives, websites, fax numbers, descriptions, founding year, designed-for age for products, and size of LD population for schools.

The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory provides comprehensive and far-reaching coverage not only for individuals with LD, but for parents, teachers, and professionals. Users will find answers to legal and advocacy questions, as well as specially designed computer software and a full range of assistive devices.

As information overload distracts to immobility, The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory, 2013 gives you the confidence that this one resource of important LD information is all you need. It assures those in the LD community that this crucial information is readily available at every school and library across the country, not just at state or district level special education resource centers. Now, every special education teacher, student, and parent can have, right at their fingertips, a wealth of information on the critical resources that are available to help individuals achieve in school and in their community.

This data in The Complete Learning Disabilities Directory is also available for subscription on G.O.L.D – Grey House Online Databases. Subscribers to G.O.L.D. can access their subscriptions via the Internet and do customized searches that make finding information quicker and easier. Now, buyers of the 2013 print edition get a free year-long subscription to the online database. Visit <http://gold.greyhouse.com> for more information.

Praise for Previous Editions:

“This is a must-have resource for individuals who work with people with different types of learning disabilities...any professional, parent, or student wanting to learn more. This is by far the best of all the resources available for learning disabled individuals. No need to search the Internet to find this information; this book provides it all at your fingertips!”
