
Introduction

This thirty-fourth edition of Directory of Mail Order Catalogs represents Grey House Publishing's longest-running annual reference directory. Despite the undisputable challenges facing the print industry in general, particularly mail order catalogs, the American Catalog Mailers Association (ACMA) is convinced that print catalogs continue to have a viable role in American retailing.

The ACMA says that the proof is Internet start-ups like Zappo's and Bonobos confirming that catalogs provide them with steady, lasting customers, and J.C. Penney acknowledging that disbanding its legendary catalog was a huge mistake.

In "Fit for Print: Why Catalog Marketing Is Still Relevant in the Digital Age," Nicola Brown says that today's successful catalogs are lifestyle products, not just a list of products. They "deliver information about new products in a highly visual format that helps people literally see how the products work and can fit into their lives. . . IKEA catalogs are a perfect example."

Brown also cites continued success of print catalogs on other factors: physical content tends to leave a longer-lasting impact than digital; people value objects they physically handle more than those they haven't touched; and consumers of all ages believe that print content is more trustworthy than digital content.

This information, combined with a projected increase in ad mail from 11% to 12% in 2020, and retailers reporting earnings of $4 for every $1 spent on catalog marketing, proves the ACMA right—print catalogs are not dead.

This edition of Directory of Mail Order Catalogs includes nearly 300 new catalogs throughout the chapters, and remains true to our mission—no online-only catalogs.

Directory of Mail Order Catalogs is two distinct directories. Section One, Consumer Catalogs arranged in 43 major chapters, from Animals to Travel & Leisure. These 43 chapters are further defined into 220 subcategories. Section Two, Business Catalogs, is aimed at the business buyer, listing catalogs in 39 major chapters, from Agriculture to Work Apparel.

These sections are separated by a colorful divider card for easy reference, and the Table of Contents is a helpful guide to the directory's listings. Many catalogs are included in more than one chapter, and five indexes allow you to search by catalog name, company name, geographical location, and product.

Each listing includes dozens of important, updated data points, from basic contact information—12,400 key executive names, 5,182 fax numbers, 6,104 web sites and 4,465 e-mails—to more specific fields, including company size, sales and the catalog's physical features.

The Directory of Mail Order Catalogs has five indexes:

- Consumer Catalog & Company: Consumer catalogs and catalog companies.
- Business Catalog & Company: Business catalogs and catalog companies.
- Consumer Geographical Index: Consumer catalog companies by state.
- Business Geographical Index: Business catalog companies by state.
- Product Index: Catalogs in more than 5,000 product categories.

For even easier access to data, Directory Mail Order Catalogs is available on our online database platform, <http://gold.greyhouse.com>. Subscribers have access to all of this business-building detail, and can search by geographic area, printing information, key contacts, sales volumes, employee size, keyword and so much more. Plus, subscribers can download contact sheets to create their own mailing list of sales leads. Visit the site or call 800-562-2139 to set up a demo of the online database.
