

Should we have been ready? The call to proactively engage with an uncertain future

Aurions-nous dû être mieux préparés? Comment aborder un avenir incertain

By / Par Dr. David S. Weiss and Peter Primdahl

The annual general meeting was almost over and then the dreaded question was asked: “Considering the fact that the industry previously experienced mysterious viruses such as SARS and H1N1, the world has been thinking about a serious pandemic affecting global citizens for over a decade. Why were we unprepared when this COVID-19 outbreak hit? Where was the pandemic readiness plan?”

The convenor astutely passed the baton to the president who gave the prepared response: “How the world responded to this unprecedented global pandemic leaves plenty of opportunities for lessons learned and for developing best practices. Like many organizations and L’assemblée générale annuelle était presque terminée, puis un participant a posé la question tant redoutée : « Sachant que notre industrie a déjà été confrontée à des virus mystérieux comme le SRAS et le H1N1, pourquoi n’étions-nous pas préparés lorsque la COVID-19 a frappé? Après tout, le monde envisage une sérieuse pandémie affectant toute la population du globe depuis plus d’une décennie. Où était donc le plan de réponse à la pandémie? »

Le modérateur a passé le micro à la PDG qui a livré la réponse préparée : « La réaction à cette pandémie nous enseigne de nombreuses leçons. Nous allons tirer des enseignements et nous améliorer. »

Take advantage of change:
When we no longer see change as a threat it becomes an opportunity

Profitez du changement : Dès que l'on n'y voit plus une menace, le changement devient une opportunité

By / Par Jennifer Spear

We often see change – any change – as a threat, but in reality it is just an “offer” and it’s our job to accept the offer. It certainly doesn’t mean that we have to like it or agree with it, but we do have to accept it: to acknowledge that it has occurred and decide how we are going to react. An offer can be any change, new constraint, feedback or suggestion, or the reality of “what is.”

For associations to take advantage of change, they need to:

- Accept the offer
- Challenge the assumptions
- Focus on members
- Yes And...

Nous considérons souvent le changement – quel qu’il soit – comme une menace, mais en réalité il ne s’agit que d’une « offre » qu’il ne tient qu’à nous d’accepter. Cela ne veut pas dire que nous devons l’aimer, mais que nous devons l’accepter. L’offre peut provenir d’un changement, d’une nouvelle contrainte, d’une suggestion, ou de la simple réalité.

Pour tirer profit du changement, les associations doivent :

- Accepter l’offre
- Remettre en cause les hypothèses
- Se concentrer sur les membres
- Oui et...

Digital advocacy:

The tectonic shift in public affairs

Plaidoyer numérique :

un virage radical pour les affaires publiques

By / Par Huw Williams

I have worked with Canadian associations for the past three decades, either in an executive role or as an advisor on public affairs issues. Over that period, there have been many political developments and technological advances, but I have not seen any shift as dramatic as the transition toward digital engagement in associations' government relations strategies.

Since the advent of social media, political parties and candidates have driven reforms in fundraising, supporter recruitment, policy development and GOTV (get out the vote) strategies. These reforms have upended electoral strategies and changed approaches to governing for the parties in power, but they all have one thing in common — they are the result of a focus on online and mobile communications that meets citizens where they are and cuts through the clutter of their busy lives.

Je travaille avec des associations canadiennes depuis maintenant trois décennies, ou bien à titre de cadre ou en tant que consultant en matière d'affaires publiques. Au cours de cette période, le pays a connu de nombreuses évolutions politiques et avancées technologiques, mais je n'ai jamais vu de changement aussi radical que le virage numérique des stratégies en matière de relations gouvernementales des associations.

Depuis l'arrivée des médias sociaux, les partis et candidats politiques ont stimulé des réformes au niveau des campagnes de financement, du recrutement de partisans, du développement de politiques et de stratégies pour inciter à voter (faire sortir le vote). Ces réformes ont renversé les stratégies électorales et changé les formes de gouvernance des partis au pouvoir, et elles ont toutes un point commun — elles sont le produit d'un accent sur les communications
